Annual Report 2023-2024

RESEARCH-ORIENTED PROGRAMMES

The institution hosted a diverse range of research-centric events and workshops during the academic year that underscored the institution's commitment to fostering academic excellence and innovation. These programs, organized by various departments, were designed to enhance the research skills of participants and promote academic excellence.

The academic year witnessed a vibrant and diverse array of research-focused initiatives that underscored the institution's commitment to fostering academic excellence and innovation. The HM Department played a pivotal role, organizing several impactful programs including "Research Methodology," "Insightrise-Research Methodology Workshop," "Research Workshop," and "Research Informative-Methodology Workshop," These events provided participants with a comprehensive understanding of fundamental and advanced research techniques, equipping them with the skills necessary to excel in their scholarly endeavours.

The PG Department of English made significant strides in the research domain by hosting workshops and conferences that explored both contemporary and niche topics. Among the highlights were "Research Methodology and MLA Format," "Contemporary Research Trends in English Literature," "Exploring Diverse Perspectives: Deconstructing Gender Narratives in Research Methods," and the "International Research Conference." These programs not only enriched participants' methodological knowledge but also encouraged critical discussions and analysis in diverse literary fields, reinforcing the importance of interdisciplinarity in research.

The Computer Science Department demonstrated its commitment to advancing technological research through the organization of "Vijnan 2K24 - National Research Conference" and the workshop on "Advanced Research Domains and Its Implementation in Computer Science." These initiatives provided a platform for researchers to delve into cutting-edge topics and explore the practical applications of advanced domains in computer science. The discussions and presentations fostered collaboration and innovation, highlighting the department's proactive approach to addressing contemporary challenges in technology.

The PG Department of Commerce and Management and the HM Department also emphasized global and environmental perspectives in research. The "International Conference - Navigating Greener Path" and sessions on "Intellectual Property" resonated with the institution's vision of sustainable development and ethical research practices. Collectively, these programs have contributed significantly to cultivating a culture of research and intellectual curiosity within the institution, empowering students and faculty to contribute meaningfully to their respective fields. Additionally, the PG Department of Commerce and Management added value by conducting specialized workshops such as "SPSS Workshop" and sessions on "Research Design and Research Methodology," emphasizing statistical analysis and robust research design.
